GICs – a taxing opportunity cost?

A key factor in the resiliency of the consumer has been the accumulation of personal savings. Statistics Canada’s National Balance Sheet Accounts data indicated that Canadian households held a total of C$2.06 trillion in currency and deposits at the end of Q1 2023 – a new record. Within these excess savings, there has been a significant spike in fixed-term deposits (i.e., GICs), which currently stand at C$647 billion – also a new record.

Personal deposits at Canadian chartered banks by type (billions of Canadian dollars)

Source: Guardian Capital based on data from the Bank of Canada to August 2023

While it’s sensible for investors to lock in at some of the highest interest rates we’ve seen in decades (at least for a portion of their portfolio), we believe there are some important points to consider.

For one, there is an adage that while you should not let the “tax tail wag the dog”, you should be aware of the tax impact of your investments. High-income earners who hold GICs in non-registered accounts will see half of their returns go to tax. So, while the headline return is attractive, the after-tax return is just keeping up with inflation, at best. Alternatively, shorter-term bonds that are currently being sold at a discount will produce capital gains, which will enhance the after-tax return.

Another consideration is the potential opportunity cost of locking in capital. For this reason, investors may want to consider short-term instruments that don’t have lock-in periods so they can quickly take advantage of the prevailing market environment.

For example, while the expectation of “higher for longer” is the consensus view, central banks appear poised to halt or at least slow the series of rate hikes they started in 2022. Should a rate-cutting cycle begin, investors will want the flexibility to shift from short rates to longer-dated bonds (longer-duration bonds), which will likely outperform short-term instruments in this scenario.

And despite the challenges over the last year and a half, equities remain one of the best ways to grow capital over time and protect against inflation. The ability to quickly move out of short-term investments can be a great way to take advantage of equity volatility. For investors with significant cash on the sidelines, utilizing a liquid short-term investment can be an excellent way to “average in” to the market and set up their portfolios for long-term success. If you would like to learn more about how you can flexibly take advantage of today’s attractive short-term rates, please reach out to your Investment Counsellor.
This document is confidential and may not be copied, reproduced, or distributed, in whole or in part, to others at any time without the prior written consent of Guardian Partners Inc. ("Guardian Partners"). The material contained herein is not intended for distribution to, or to be used by, any person or entity in any jurisdiction or country in which distribution or use would be contrary to law or regulation. Except as otherwise permitted herein, distribution of this material to any person other than the person to whom this was originally delivered and to such person's advisors is unauthorized and any reproduction, in whole or in part, or the divulgence of its contents, without the prior consent of Guardian Partners in each such instance is prohibited. This document is not intended to be, nor should it be construed or used as legal or tax advice. The material contained herein has been prepared solely for informational purposes and is not an offer to buy or sell or a solicitation of an offer to buy or sell any security or instrument or to participate in any trading strategy. It is not offered as investment advice and does not account for individual investment objectives, risk tolerance, financial situation or the timing of any transaction in any specific security or asset class. The statements and opinions expressed herein are as of the date hereof (unless otherwise indicated) and are subject to change as economic and market conditions dictate. This document includes information and commentary concerning financial markets that was developed at a particular point in time. This information and commentary are subject to change at any time, without notice, and without update. This commentary may also include forward-looking statements concerning anticipated results, circumstances, and expectations regarding future events. Forward-looking statements require assumptions to be made and are, therefore, subject to inherent risks and uncertainties. There is significant risk that predictions and other forward-looking statements will not prove to be accurate. Investing involves risk. Equity markets are volatile and will increase and decrease in response to economic, political, regulatory and other developments. The risks and potential rewards are usually greater for small companies and companies located in emerging markets. Bond markets and fixed-income securities are sensitive to interest rate movements. Inflation, credit and default risks are also associated with fixed income securities. Diversification may not protect against market risk and loss of principal may result. Effort has been made to ensure that the material presented herein is accurate at the time of publication. Trademarks and logos belong to their respective owners.

Guardian Partners Inc. provides private client investment services and is a wholly owned subsidiary of Guardian Capital Group Limited, a publicly traded firm listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange. For further information on Guardian Capital Group Limited and its affiliates, please visit www.guardiancapital.com. For further information on Guardian Partners Inc., please visit www.guardiancapital.com/gpi. All trademarks, registered and unregistered, are owned by Guardian Capital Group Limited and are used under license.

Published: November 02, 2023